

Paul Runge is Managing Director of Africa Project Access, a consultancy that specializes in provision of early alert of projects in southern Africa. He also monitors the major funding agencies operating in Africa, such as the World Bank and African Development Bank.

Paul Runge has direct experience in Africa, having visited 32 African countries from 1982-present. He lived in Gabon for 2-years, and worked intermittently for 3-years in the Cape Verde islands.

He leads numerous business group visits into Africa, and has lead business group visits to Washington, Tunis / Abidjan and Brussels. He also hosts and facilitates business meetings for incoming delegations from the World Bank, African Development Bank, etc. He was coordinator of the Emerging Market Focus research team for production of the World Bank Africa Business Contacts Directory. He maintains interaction with African organisations such as Africa Investor, NEPAD, etc

Servicing on a constant basis of some 130 companies involved in project development in Africa, he produces several publications including the Africa Project Newsletter, Africa Project Database, and Africa Contact Database, and he is a regular contributing writer in Africa-specialist business publications, Africa Investor (London), Traders (South Africa), Farm Africa (South Africa), plus ad-hoc articles for local and international media and occasional radio and television interviews with local and international stations,

Paul has lectured at WITS Business School, Stellenbosch University and UNISA School of Business Leadership on project cycles and their implications for business.

He has frequent interaction with South African government and government-related organisations, notably the Department of Trade and Industry, Department of Foreign Affairs, Department of Finance, as well as professional bodies and export councils.

He travels frequently to Europe, North America and Asia on Africa-related issues.